

Rev. Pam's Reflections for January, 2012

The wheel of the universe turns and a new year begins . . . one that calls us into expanding beyond our old perceptions of time and space as we enter into 2012. Each and every soul present on our starship Earth is here at this time by divine appointment. Each brings his or her unique spark of Light that comes from the One Light from which we all emerge and to which we all return. A spark of Light sent to bless and be blessed by simply being alive.

As the new year begins, we have the opportunity to clarify our intentions, to align more closely with our own soul calling, to revision how we see ourselves and our world, and to consciously engage with life in its myriad of expressions. To see the beauty of the mineral, plant, and animal kingdoms that abide with us. To encounter anew the wonder of nature in its many forms from sea to sky, forest to mountain. To walk beside our brothers and sisters with more compassion, wisdom and love.

This year we will explore the transformative power of prayer which allows us to reconnect with essential truths, with elemental energies, and with the Presence of the Divine in new ways. Gift yourself with some time each and every day to renew your soul from the Well of Prayer. Whether that prayer is silent, sung , chanted or intoned with words – commune with Spirit this year. Allow yourself to open to the Alchemy of Prayer. Watch as seeming lead in your life becomes radiant as gold simply by holding whatever it is up to the True Light. This year let us embrace the mystery and all of its unfoldings, knowing that all is working toward Highest and Best.

You have been sent. You come blessed and blessing, You walk not alone, for not only is Spirit with you always . . . but also your spiritual family at Unity. Remember the words of George Eliot . . . It is never too late to be what you might have been. May we celebrate the unfolding of 2012 with all its mysteries and wonders . . . with all its challenges and miracles . . . and do so with this circle of kindred spirits who are open to new possibilities individually and together.
